Expense of a 15-Minute Battle. A New York paper has compiled an interesting statement showing the cost of one of the big modern ships to the government after she is put into commission. The protected cruiser Cincinnati, the latest of our cruisers put into commission, is taken as an example of the cost of maintaining a warship. The Cincinnati is a 3,200-ton protected cruiser, carrying a complement of 27 officers and 293 men. Her battery consists of one 6-inch rifle on the forecastle deck, eight 5-inch rapid-fire guns on the main deck, and two 5-inch rapidthe main deck, and two 5-inco rapid-fire gilns on the poop deck. The sec-ondary battery is made up of eight rap-id-fire Hotchkiss 6-pounders and four rapid-fire Hotchkiss 1-pounders. She is driven by two vertical engines, sep-arated from each other by a fore-and-aft bulkhead; each of these, it is expected, will develop something more than 5,000-horse power.

The daily expense in running this ship in New York harbor may be tabulated as follows:

Pay of officers..... 96 16 sum, representing the almost endless miscellaneous articles, from alcohol to miscellaneous articles, from alcohol to vaseline, which are used on board.

When cruising the daily consumption of coal depends, of course, upon the speed to be made. At twenty knots the Cincinnati would burn about two hundred and twenty tons in twenty-four hours, while at eleven knots, her usual cruising speed, orly thirty-three tons would be burned. The price of coal varies from $2.50 to $25 a ton in different ports, but the average paid in a trip around the world would be about $9. We may, then, estimate the daily coal bill at sea at about $300. Add this coal bill at sea at about $300. Add this to the above expenses and we have a daily expenditure of $783, leaving out

The estimate of the cost of a fight lasting fifteen minutes between the Cincinnati and a vessel of equal power, supposing the fire of the former to be continuous, is as follows: Each projectile fired from a 6-inch breech loading rifle costs $23 and the powder about $15, the figures varying slightly on account of the variation in the weight of the charge with different lots of der. The total cost of each round, in-cluding cartridge bag, primer, freight expenses to the ship and other minor items, may be safely estimated as very nearly $40. Each round from a 5-inch rapid-fire gun costs $33, of which $15 is for the been fired twelve times at a total expense of $480. Five 5-inch rapid-fire guns have each been fired six times a minute, the total cost amounting to $14,850.

been fired ten times a minute at a total cost of $3,420. Two 1-pounder Hotchkiss guns have been fired thirteen times a minute at a cost of $436.

The total cost of the ammunition exengagement has amounted to about $150 more, so that the direct expenses of fighting a cruiser of 3,200 tons for fifteen minutes has been $28,736.

The cost of ammunition that would be used by the great battle-ship Indiana in a fight of fifteen minutes of continuous firing is estimated at $74,353. The cost of building and arming the Indiana exceeded $4,000,000, and if she should be sunk in the engagement, that sum town sites laid out, levels for drainage given. would have to be added to the cost of
